"There were in the world
two ugly giants who believed themselves
very important..."

It all starts with this amusing nursery rhyme that tells the story of two twin giants, robust and mighty, who throw punches left and right. Their motto is: Use force, and you'll be right! Everyone runs away when they arrive, afraid of getting beaten and bruised. The town doesn't know how to get rid of these bullies until a little girl takes an apple, paints it gold, and writes on it: Let the strongest and most powerful man take it. She places it in front of them.

The story ends well, reminding everyone that to defeat bullies, it's better to use your brains.

"Having escaped the pirates, I ran to Giuliano and told him about Uluch Ali's threats. When he heard the name Dragut, my mentor turned as white as a candle..."

In the mid-1500s, Daniele, the son of a fisherman, became an apprentice to Giovanni Giuliano, a mute painter. One morning, the boy spotted three Barbary pirate ships that anchored on the beach. He discovered that they were waiting for their leader, Dragut, who had come to reclaim a precious dagger stolen by someone living in Belvedere.

With the help of some accomplices, the boy devised a cunning plan to get rid of the pirates. Will he succeed in driving them away and saving his hometown? And is Giovanni truly who he appears to be?

What happens when the use of smartphones is imposed on five friends just before the magical summer of fifth grade, the one without any homework to do, with days to fill with games, bike rides, and chats in the den under the willow tree?

It happens that after the initial euphoria, Al, Olè, Mau, Gea, and Zac realize that they feel like prisoners: they have to send a message every time they move, they have to be careful not to lose that expensive gadget, and they have to constantly respond to requests from their parents.

And so, with the help of old Reginaldo, who takes care of the communal woods and gardens throughout the town, the five friends decide to embark on a real adventure, free from those blessed smartphones. An adventure out of control. And perhaps we will discover that it's the adults who are actually out of control.

"I've never seen a show like this!" exclaimed the audience, wiping their sweaty foreheads.

Ada and Cleto received three thunderous applause.

Ada and Cleto want to set up a circus, but no one wants two children as directors. So, they invent a machine that manipulates water and gives shape and life to bizarre water animals: water trapeze monkeys, juggling water octopuses, water cannon hippos. And finally, they have their circus: the circus of water animals.

The performances are thrilling. Show after show, they become so famous that the audience crowds at the entrance to see the spectacle. Until something goes wrong... the water runs out! The long pipes connected to the lakes are empty, and the machine wheezes, parched.

They are about to give up on their dream when...

Bilù, a kind and smiling child, arrives in a village where the inhabitants cannot understand each other.

In Buonvicino everyone loved each other. But one day something changed, people became sad and began not to understand each other: "Today I would like to make a soup: I need celery, can you give me two pieces, please?" Mariapina asked. "Excellent choice" replied the greengrocer: "the peppers have just arrived!" Envy began to pollute hearts and build walls. Everything changes with the arrival of Bilù, a smiling child who manages to make himself popular with everybody thanks to his kindness.

What if it was you?

Professor Gene Amperio is an old scientist checking for man on earth not wasting too much energy. He spends all his time in a laboratory in the heart of the mountain where, using sophisticated equipment, he keeps an eye on energy consumption. The only visit he receives is that of his granddaughter Lucilla, whom everyone calls Luce. One day while Lucilla is with her grandfather, one of the alarms starts to sound: it means that the man is wasting too much energy. And the environment suffers. It is time to look for a human specimen who treats energy responsibly: a Homo Energeticus. The grandfather is too old to travel, so Lucilla packs her bags and leaves.

CATALOGUE 2024

Enrica is a very wise young ant, but she has no butt and she has spent her whole life being teased. On a particularly cold day you have a brilliant intuition. She grabs a pair of woolen underwear and rejoices: "Finally, I'll be able to wear them too!" And she slips her panties on her head! The holes for her paws seem to be made especially for her antennae. And so, she is ready to face her cold day at work outdoors.

At the beginning everyone laughs behind her, then the panties on her head become a fashion of the whole anthill, so much so that she is even elected Queen.

American Baptist minister and activist leader of the civil rights movement.

Martin is a black boy in America in the 30s. He tells us the most important episodes of his life, the invincible power of ideas even in the face of time and death.

The autobiographical story alternates with several episodes that can happen to children like him in different parts of the world even today. This story helps us understand that there is still a long way to go to respect rights. This is why Martin's dream is not an impossible hope, but an achievable goal.

Katia is fifteen and every day, after school, she meets her group in front of a garden whose owner, an old lady, can't stand those ill-mannered teenagers. Furious, the woman imposes on them a severe punishment, in agreement with their school headmaster. While everyone else is sent to collect garbage for a few weeks, Katia is required to keep company to the lady herself. The girl is upset, unwilling to accept such humiliation, but little by little Mrs. Olga Mautino's silences, her gentle behavior, her interesting books, will bring the two women closer and closer.

The girl discovers a world she would never have imagined, the world of Russia in the 1940s, of the Communist party and the gulags, of the freezing cold and the sufferings caused by the insanity of Stalin's regime.

“Throughout my life, I jumped from one adventure to another, without ever stopping. Always on the move, always in action, always ready to experiment”.

Ulysses tells us his adventures in first person, from his departure from Troy to his return to Ithaca. Curious and ingenious, he will use all his senses to make us live this long journey and introduce the characters he meets, in his Odyssey: such as Polyphemus, the sorceress Circe, the sirens, Calypso and so on.

CATALOGUE 2024

An Italian girl seeking her roots among everyday difficulties and fears.

Habiba lives in the suburbs of Rome, in a condominium full of Chinese, Indians, Egyptians... and Habiba?

"She's Italian", says her mother, which crossed the stormy sea to give birth to her here.

"No, she's African", protests aunt Aminata, braiding her hair.

"First of all I'm an AS Roma fan", thinks Habiba. This is the only thing that divides her from her best friend: Marta is fan of the team Lazio, instead Habiba supports Roma team, which is also called "La Magica". She doesn't know it, but la Magica is going to be part of her life. She will have to learn to find secrets, play tricks, face the fear.

CATALOGUE 2024

A book that deals with friendship, adolescence and disabilities, but that also denounces the solitude and difficulties of families with special needs children.

Andrea, thirteen years old, doesn't feel like doing anything, his mind is full of thoughts but without a clear idea. Marta is a special girl apparently without worries: her mind is quiet, like her, skinny as a rail. Andrea is like an older brother to her. She is his guardian angel... but it's hard to keep up with Marta. Or maybe it's hard to grow up: when you are thirteen you feel different.

CATALOGUE 2024

The thoughts of a grandmother and those of her grandson seem distant and different, but they meet in this wonderful illustrated book.

A dyslexic child and his grandmother suffering from Alzheimer's disease: the words fail them. An album to search and find a common path to both, where art and stories become mutual aid, allow the coexistence of two different and complex identities. The book alternates the two voices of the grandmother and her little grandson through Arianna Papini's images (Andersen award 2018).

CATALOGUE 2024

What if on Christmas night in addition to gifts... you received a pink alien?

"If, on Christmas eve, Santa Claus brings presents to every child in the world, then why shouldn't he bring one to my alien friend too?", Sandrino wonders. Ever since he read The Little Prince, he has known for sure that on one planet in the universe lives a boy who would love to know him. What if he found out that, even on a far-off planet, children know Santa Claus? And, above all, that also Santa was a child once? Aliens, children, presents... a great chaos for an unforgivable night!!

CATALOGUE 2024

The first-person story of a brave contemporary teacher, coping with countless commitments in her private as well as professional life.

The private and the public sphere: two outposts to be guarded and defended from clichés, prejudices and institutional indifference, at all costs. Our fearless and generous teacher, just like a hero and sometimes all on her own, faces with the same resourcefulness the flu as well as shortage of toilet paper. She is always enthusiastic and shows an extraordinary respect for her pupils.

Coccolebooks

Coccole books was born eighteen years ago in Calabria by Ilario and Daniela companions in life, who choose to leave their professions to do something new, able to put together their common interest: children's books. The initial enthusiasm and passion were consolidated thanks to the experience, the professionalism of the collaborators, the projects created and carried out in the area. Coccole books is proud of its absolute autonomy. Every day he is committed to building a network of services and interests around the book and its trades. Its founders, in fact, are convinced that making books for children represents a concrete political action, capable of producing change. Publishing good stories and printing good books means making a small revolution, choosing an alternative way to look at the things of life and the sometimes-complicated aspects of southern Italy.
