Highly Sensitive Children

Publication Date: January, 2001

Author: Antje Gertrud Hofmann

Pages: 280

Imprint: Aurum

They are called “children of a new age, “people from the future” or “precursors of a fundamental change of consciousness”. However, the euphoria expressed in these terms does not alter the fact that the current situation of these children is rather difficult. Their highly sensitive souls are already evident when they are babies: either they are strikingly quiet and content children, or they are bawlers. In kindergarden, highly sensitive children are often overwhelmed because they perceive everything that is going on around much more clearly than others. In school, they are often referred to as behavioral. But a closer look reveals that most highly sensitive children are very intelligent, creative, friendly and helpful.

This book delivered warmhearted, timely information for parents and teachers.

Wolf-Dieter Storl understands the almost forgotten knowledge of herbs by opening our eyes and heart to the true essence of the plants.

The true herbalist is not just a botanist or pharmacologist, someone who knows the plants from outside and has read something about their application. He is an occultist in the sense that he can look under the surface of the world of phenomena. www.storl.de

What methods of healing did the Celts, Germans, and Slavs know? How did shamans deal with the gods, natural spirits, disease demons, and other beings from the other world? What role did sacred healing plants or totemic animals play? How and why does this affect us today?

Wolf-Dieter Storl is a cultural anthropologist and ethnobotanist. He was a lecturer at various universities in the US, Austria, Switzerland and India. Traveling to many countries of the world and contacts with indigenous peoples as well as to native peasants and herbalists shaped his view of the world.

Galsan Tschinag

Und diese alarmierende Rückbesinnung erhellte mich ausgerechnet in dem Augenblick, da ich kurz davor stand, zu erfahren, ob die Regenmaschine wirklich das bringen würde, was ich von ihr erwartete: Bringt sie Regen, wird mein langjähriger Traum in Erfüllung gehen. Bringt sie keinen Regen, werde ich eine schmerzvolle Niederlage erleiden.

Was wollte ich? Den verloren gegangenen Regen in die Steppe zurückholen und so meinem Land einen guten Dienst leisten. Ja, der Regen, der war für mich das Lebenswasser. So grob war ich seit Jahr und Tag und in diesem Augenblick der Mädchenjunge, der Epa-Ricke, der Held, der sich einer offenen Sache aufopfert. Der edle Sohn der Heimat und des Volkes. Der gütige Wächter der Steppe und ihrer Bewohner. Der mutige Krieger des schwer bedrohten Kleinstaatens, der Mongolei heißt. Dann ging endlich, endlich die Sonne auf. Das war der Augenblick, auf den ich gewartet hatte. Ich streckte mich gerade und lag zu mir zu liegen, zu schlafen, zu ruhen. Als ich es tat, beobachtete ich meinen Blick überwand in die aufgebende Sonne. Dabei dachte ich, dass die Sonne das Auge des Himmels ist. Also wollte ich dem Himmel danken für Augen schauen, ja, mit ihm in Augenblicke bleiben. Und mit ihm reden, ihn fragen, ihn gegenüber aussprechen, was ich in diesem Augenblick dachte. Denn schließlich hatte ich schmerzhaftige Gründe dazu. Also schrie ich aus, begleitet von Schwingungen des Windes: „Nicht wir sind es, die Plagegeister und Raketen gebaut haben und mit ihnen in dich hineinziehen und dich verletzen! Nicht wir sind es, die Autos und Passier erfinden haben und damit das Antlitz der Mutter Erde verunstalten! Wir sind die Letzten, die zu Euch sehen und bis zuletzt danach trachten, Euch in Ruhe zu lassen und Euch weiterhin zu verehren! Warum, warum waren aber nicht Eure bestmögliche Polizei aus immer mehr? Ja, immer sind wir es, die leiden müssen, während die wahren Schädigen unbestraft bleiben und immer, immer, immer frecher werden? Warum, warum geht für uns keiner Regen mehr?“

Da brach ich in Tränen aus und schrie, brüllte, röchelte, gegen Tränen ankämpfend: „Oh, geb mir doch für jeden Tropfen Träne einen Tropfen Wasser!“ Und so zog sich dieses Geschrei, dieses Getöse wohl in die Länge. Wobei ich längst nicht mehr wusste, wie lange das noch dauerte und was dazwischen, dazwischen noch geschah.

Ich war längst weg und rohe wohl, wie ein Wolf in der Falle. Irgendwann nahm ich wahr, dass jemand versuchte, mich von der Erde hochzusetzen. Dann kam ich langsam zu mir und erkannte, es war eine meiner Schwägerinnen. Und da wurde mir bewusst, dass mein Gesicht voll Tränen und Rote war, und die ganze Tracht voll Staub. Ich muss auf der Erde gelegen und heilig mit Händen und Füßen gezappelt und gestampelt haben. Der Himmel konnte darauf natürlich ganz gewiss haben, dachte ich nun. Doch hörte ich dann, als ich auf den Beinen stand und langsam, milde, milde, wieder zu mir kam, die Kinder sagen:

„Schaut mal, Papa, auf den Himmel!“ Ich tat es und sah, die formlosen Wolken über der Stadt, ach, eigentlich gar keine Wolken, sondern hässliche Massen aus Qualm und Dampf von vornherein, diese waren alle in heftige Bewegung geraten und waren nun dabei, sich zu richtigen Wolken zu formen. Und da dachte ich schnell, der Himmel hat doch geantwortet! Tatsächlich merkte man deutlich, es kam ein Wind auf, der immer kühler wirkte. Und später erfuhren wir, die Temperaturen waren vom Morgen bis zum Mittag um vier Grad gefallen – obwohl die Gegend sonst normal gewesen wäre. Schnell kam ein Wind auf und nahm an Stärke heftig zu, so dass die Menschen, die dann angezogen waren, in die Autos flüchten mussten. Vier Tage später gab es reichlich Schnee, was schon ungewöhnlich für diese Jahreszeit war. Zwei Tage später fiel weiterer Schnee. Und dann kam endlich der ach so ersehnte Regen. Dem dann in kurzen Abständen weitere Regenschauer folgten.
